The Papa's Story:

To quote the song "Papa was a Rolling Stone" in reference to this restaurant, would be slightly amiss. Actually, Papa's has a great Beatles connection. Jim McCormack, the original Papa, was a designer for Vee Jay records in the early 1960s. Vee Jay was a Chicago company, owned by a couple named Vivian Carter{Vee} and Jimmy Bracken{Jay} with a rich history of Jazz, Blues and Doo Wop music. While there, Jim designed dozens of album covers, including the jacket for what was to be the Beatles first album cover.

The original test lithograph is hanging over our bar, but you'll be hard pressed to find a copy of the original pressing in record stores. Vee Jay didn't see much of a future in Rock & Roll "nonsense", especially thosesnotty British kids, John, Paul, George and Ringo. They sold The Beatles to Capitol Records for $350 in 1963 amidst legal troubles. I still remember when Dad came running into my bedroom before school yelling, "I knew it! I knew it!" when the first Beatles big American hit "I Want To Hold Your Hand" came over the airwaves. Papa was like that; he always knew when something big was about to happen. He later took part in finding other talent for Vee Jay, who maintained their roots as an R&B label with artists like Sara Vaughn, Jimmy Reed, John Lee Hooker, The Spaniels, Little Richard, Jimi Hendrix (briefly) and the Four Seasons. Jim scouted out an unknown band in California, who played this weird surfing style of music full of strange 3 part harmonies and high male voices. He urged Vee Jay to sign them, but they passed on that deal too. That band was the Beach Boys and as they, and Rock & Roll in general exploded onto the music scene, Vee Jay went out of business as Jazz and Blues took a backseat to Rock in the mid 1960s.

Soon after, the McCormack family began summering in Culver. By the early 70s, Papa began to envision a restaurant; a place where families and friends could gather and enjoy casual dining and great friendships. Anyone that met Jim and his wife, Marion, knew that Papa's was all about making customers feel like family. Now over 40 years later, Jim's vision has helped his family make Papa's a Culver Institution. So sit back, relax, and enjoy some of Jim's favorite recipes and concoctions. Oh, and you should probably try the pizza, voted Indiana's Best. "Who voted?" you ask, why Papa himself. He knew that Papa's pizza was going to be big. After all, he wasn't wrong about the Beatles...
